U. S. Co-Operation First Aim.

Now, in considering this league question it is well to bear in mind that the President-elect has no idea of Europe is less interested in the present league than in America's co-operation in some kind of a world organization, and that just as Woodrow Wilson may have indicated, the formation of the kind of league he believed America wanted, so another American President has the moral power to put through his particular kind of program.

Just what the league of nations will look like when the negotiations between the next administration and the European powers are concluded is difficult to say. Some irreconcilable will be satisfied if they can eliminate article X, which Mr. Wilson called the "heart of the covenant." With that article gone and other articles substituted, they may be ready to call it "a new association" or "the Harding league" and push for ratification. The one thing certain is that the President-elect himself committed to some kind of a league or association of nations, and that it is pretty well assured and understood in the White House that the next administration will public opinion around the world has so ready to predict that he would be.

RECLASSIFICATION EXTENSION SOUGHT

Bill to Apply It Outside of Washington Before Meeting Today.

Preparation of a bill to extend reclassification to the entire civil service of the country as well as to government employees in the District was in its final stages today at a meeting held in the office of Chairman Lehigh of the House committee on reform in the civil service.

That the bill to be presented by Mr. Lehigh will ask the extension of reclassification to all federal workers throughout the country was the important feature of the meeting, presided over by Robert Moses, reclassification expert, who is working for the committee.

Further changes. Chairman Lehigh is expected in Washington either late today or tomorrow when it is anticipated he will give the revised bill careful attention, and indicate how the revision must be changed yet to meet with approval.

Extension of the scope of reclassification legislation to the whole country would be a vast step over the confined merely to the government service in the District. The National Federation of Federal Employees and other organizations have been fighting to get the entire personnel of the country's civil service reclassified.

Mr. Lehigh will have complete figures to show Congress just what reclassification to the entire country would mean on the cost of such legislation is still much a matter of speculation. It is anticipated that reclassification merely the service here, with such minimum reclassification as is deemed necessary, would entail the expenditure of millions of dollars.

Extension of the benefits of such a reclassification to the entire country would necessarily send the cost of the subject matter to the House of Representatives and the Senate would look at the matter with some hesitancy, although there are not wanting those who believe that "Congress will act" and that "Congress will not."

Find Rare Penny Which Says "Mind Your Business"

DOVER, Mass., November 4.—A Franklin penny, the first ever seen to be authorized by Congress, has been found on the homestead of one of the first settlers here. It was struck in 1779, and one of a few that were coined.

The penny took its name from Benjamin Franklin, because of the inclusion in its design of the homestead of the first settler here. It was struck in 1779, and one of a few that were coined.

ARNSTEIN BROUGHT TO D. C. FOR TRIAL

Alleged "Master Mind" in Bond Case Does Not Object to Early Hearing.

Julius, alias Nicky Arnstein, the alleged "master mind" in the $5,000,000 bond robbery in New York, was brought to Washington last night by Deputy United States Marshal Dempsey of New York, in response to a writ of habeas corpus issued earlier in the week by Justice Gould of the United States Supreme Court for his arraignment on an indictment charging him with conspiracy to bring stolen securities into the District of Columbia. Arnstein is in custody of the federal authorities in New York on a commitment for contempt of court in refusing to answer certain questions in bankruptcy proceedings.

Natally attired and smoking a cigarette, Arnstein stood quietly while his attorney, Eugene McGee of New York, explained to reporters that Arnstein had been clamoring for trial in New York of the charges against him there in connection with the alleged robbery and would make objection to setting an early date for his trial here on the conspiracy indictment. Arnstein showed no ill effects from his stay in the New York prison. He is prepared, according to his counsel, to give bail for his appearance, if required, or to come here for trial without bail.

United States Attorney Laskey, who went to New York with the writ for Arnstein, conferred by long-distance telephone this afternoon with Justice Gould as to the matter of holding the arraignment of the prisoner. He will be arraigned tomorrow and until then remain in the custody of the New York authorities.

He is practicing law in New York. He is the author of several books and is a contributor of fiction to several periodicals.

D. C. COAL SUPPLY SITUATION CLEARS

Optimistic Regarding Shortage Relief.

Decided improvement in the anthracite coal situation in the District of Columbia may be expected within a reasonably short time, E. W. Parker, director of the anthracite coal bureau in Philadelphia, told E. H. De Groot of the Interstate Commerce Commission over the long-distance telephone today.

Mr. Parker told Mr. De Groot he had mailed a letter to him last night, answering the three questions asked by the District coal committee, concerning the present anthracite shortage here. Mr. Parker did not answer any of the questions specifically over the telephone, but said the matters were all taken up in his letter, which was expected to reach the commission today.

Just what step, if any, the President will now take in this matter is a subject which Parker said he was unable to say. The District coal committee fears that when large shipments of anthracite begin to come to Washington cold weather will already have set in and that before consumers' requirements can be met many families will have to go through hardships and privation.

Now that coal priority orders for the northwest have been withdrawn, Mr. Parker believes that immediate shipments of coal to Washington might be expected. ## PRESIDENT MAINTAINS SILENCE ON ELECTION

Makes No Comment and Sends No Message to Either Cox or Harding.

President Wilson has made no comment upon the outcome of Tuesday's election, according to officials of the White House who see him daily. Nor has he sent messages to either President-elect Harding or Gov. Cox, so far as these officials were able to learn at noon today.

Health is unaffected. The President's health apparently has been unaffected by the result of the election. According to Admiral Gary T. Grayson, his personal physician, his spirits and health are good. He slept well last night and election night, and he has since followed his usual daily routine, including his afternoon automobile ride through Rock Creek Park and his morning "sun bath" on the south porch.

Official and diplomatic Washington already is speculating as to the President's probable course with regard to the treaty of Versailles, which has been tucked away in the White House since the Senate's refusal to ratify it for a second time last February.

Just what step, if any, the President will now take in this matter is a subject which Parker said he was unable to say. ## RIFLE WORK ON HILLTOP.

Association at Georgetown. Steps are being taken at Georgetown University to organize a branch of the National Rifle Association, under the Reserve Officers' Training Corps unit. Maj. William H. Hobson, Army officer detailed by the War Department at Georgetown, is making the arrangements.

In view of the increasing demand of the Georgetown unit, Maj. Hobson will have a non-commissioned officer to assist him in giving military instruction and in the work on the rifle range. He has drawn up plans for an R. O. T. C. command to be elected by the cadets, one from each class. This body will act in an advisory capacity and is expected to do much in the way of making the course interesting to the students.

Maj. Hobson hopes to have Georgetown's "distinguished cadets" list this year. Some of the men in the unit have made records in national rifle matches. E. D. Murphy having qualified for the Camp Perry shoot.

To encourage military preparedness at Georgetown, the Washington Chamber of Commerce announced yesterday that it will offer records in national rifle matches. The chamber took this action after an investigation of the work being done on the "hilltop."
